The Mahabharata – the world's longest poem – is itself a text that was likely written and compiled over several hundred years, one dated between " BCE or little earlier, and 2nd-century CE, though some claim a few parts can be put as late as CE", states Fowler. According to Kashi Nath Upadhyaya, a Gita scholar, it is possible that a number of different individuals with the same name compiled different texts. Due to varying predominance of the 5 Ayurvedic elements in different types of milk, ghee from different species have different properties.

Because of this, some people say that the Bhagavad Gita propagates war. At more advanced levels, the practitioner experiences deep peace and tranquility, which carry over into everyday life. ViewWishlist.The Gita considers the world to be transient, all bodies and matter as impermanent. According to the Indologist Barbara Miller, the text frames heroism not in terms of physical abilities, but instead in terms of effort and inner commitment to fulfill a warrior's dharma in the battlefield.
