It was built in one piece and had a double reed made from cane. The Treble Clef is normally G4 Hz. In a chorus of airy spirits, the composer has used two pianos for four hands. Andante, and III. Parts are a rental. The soprano saxhorn in B flat is more frequently used than that in C; and though it is a tone lower than the C saxhorn it is already difficult or at least very strenuous for the player to sound the last two notes; these valuable notes must therefore be used very sparingly and must be introduced in a skilful way. Please help improve this section by adding citations to reliable sources. The saxophone and trumpet solos are not identical but have differences to suit the character of each instrument. The piccolo sounds one octave higher than its written pitch. PlayableKeys.1 is a step-up feature, desirable because it decreases resistance.
